WEEKLY FISH MARKET.

Trade has been very fair this week and fish, with the exception of shuck, via Boston, has been in only moderate receipt.

Many of the mackerel fleet have hauled out, not having seen a fish for two weeks, and are now fitting for different branches of winter fishing. The salt mackerel catch will be much below even last years' small catch.

The splitting prices of fresh cod and haddock have advanced sharply and show no signs of sliding back. This is caused by the fact that the eastern shuckers, with full baitings of squid to work on have about all returned with much smaller fares than were expected. This the dealers know is a poor outlook for good second trips by the salt bankers, which would mean a short supply of salt codfish.

News from the salt bank fleet backs up this feeling, several of the vessels having been heard from as just beginning fishing operations. Scarcity of bait has been the great trouble, some of the craft being five weeks without putting p trawl in the water.

The market on all grade of fish is very firm.

The receipts at this port for the week ending Sept. 10 are 483,000 lbs. salt cod.

OFF SOUTHWEST HARBOR.

Sch. Maud S. Made Good Haul of Large Mackerel.

At That Port This Morning with 110 Barrels.

The first mackerel news for some time arrived this morning, when a despatch received here stated that sch. Maud S., arrived at Southwest Harbor this forenoon with 110 barrels of salt mackerel. The fish were taken off there, and are of extra large size, the same as those taken off Sankaty Head, a few weeks ago.

Two small craft with fairly large trips of mackerel arrived at Portland yesterday and relieved the monotony which was becoming painfully apparent along the water front the last few days. They were the sloop Wodan of this port and the sch. Freedom of Salem, each of about 10 tons burden, and each bringing in 2000 mackerel. The schooners Evangeline and Angielena also arrived, but they had not had the luck of the other arrivals, the former having only two and the latter 15 mackerel in all, although the Evangeline had about 1000 pounds of mixed fish to help out her trip. All the captains complained of the sharks, which are very numerous off the coast just now, and which not only interfere with the fish by driving away the schools, but also make themselves a nuisance by destroying the nets.

The New England catch of salt mackerel to date is 27,510 barrels against 37,213 barrels at this time last year.

Total import of New Irish to date 8602 barrels against 15,886 barrels last year.

French mackerel landed to date 46,000 barrels, against 58,000 barrels last year.
